

VAGINAL STEAM BATH

Why do a Vaginal Steam?

From a physical perspective, vaginal steams are a great way to cleanse the Uterus, helping to remove unwanted waste and old lining. It also helps to encourage the Uterus into an open and more upright position.

From an emotional and spiritual perspective, it is literally going up through your Root Chakra to cleanse. So you may have upsetting experiences or unwanted memories of partners that have “been” and “attached” through your Root Chakra. Alternatively, you may be looking to encourage Love or Fertility into your life, and if your Root Chakra is blocked, this could help to encourage the right energy your way.

How to do:

To do a vaginal steam treatment you need a large double handful of any of the fresh herbs mentioned below (or any combination of two or more) to boil in a large pot that holds about two gallons of water. If the herbs you are using are dry, you will need a single large handful to the same amount of water. Boil the herbs in the water for twenty minutes and remove from the heat.

Place the steaming pot of herbs on the floor and sit over the pot on a chair with holes or slats in the seat. Your body should be one or two feet above the steaming herbs. You should be naked from the waist down with a towel wrapped around your legs and waist to hold in the heat. You should remain in the chair absorbing the herbal steam into your vagina for twenty minutes. If you feel like it is burning you, remove the pot of herbs and let them cool for five minutes and replace.

Afterward, one must be careful about exposure to cold drafts or sleeping in an air-conditioned room. You should keep warm after the steam bath. The ideal would be to go directly to bed and wrap up warmly for an hour. This will serve to strengthen the treatment and allow your body to process the healing effects of the vaginal steam bath. This should be done about 7 days before your period is due and may be repeated every month until improvement is realised.
